2700 Colorado Blvd, Apt. 1231
Denton, TX 76210

My field of study includes comparative politics and international relations. I specialize in Canadian Politics, multiculturalism, and immigration and refugees. My experience in this field includes my undergraduate research comparing the rates of gender-based violence (GBV) in the Syrian Refugee and the Central American Migrant Crises. My thesis includes comparing citizenship, immigration, and Muslim women's rights in Canada and France. Furthermore, my doctoral research includes the impact state conceptions have on public attitudes towards refugees.
